

@setvendiheia
@sebcenter
@sheilacenter @entertainment

Wedding TRENDS 2021

STIEN & SHEILA CENTER, CANADA'S LEADING ENTERTAINING POWER E, PROVIDE THEIR INSIGHT INTO TRENDS IN WEDDING DÉCOR FOR 2021

resent the ultimate friends and family
Many brides have ing day since they couple has a unique wedding will look

addings in their normal possible, we have brate their special versions of their initial of feel like it right now.

weddings of all sizes and scales will come back eventually, and many of our larger weddings planned for 2020 have simply decided to hold off until 2021.

Whether it's earlier 2021 or late 2021, we believe (being the eternal optimists) that people will come together to celebrate again soon. In groups, and with music and dancing, because to celebrate is human-nature and nothing can keep human-nature down.

For 2021 we look back at five of our favourite Entertainment Weddings from the past couple of years that demonstrate very differing looks, each of which we feel was ahead of its time and will make up the most popular décor trends for weddings in the coming years.

So for all our brides and grooms out there dreaming of their perfect day, here's to you and to your dream wedding.

Photos: Laura May

Where modern and combine for a truly unique

CONTEMPORARY
chic

A modern look is not for everyone.
While we love a minimalist and stark look ourselves, for many wedding clients modern may feel too cold. When our friends Brendan & Duane decided to tie the knot they wanted their personal modern aesthetic showcased but also wanted to create a warm environment for their closest friends and family to celebrate with them.

This wedding had a very special twist as the grooms wanted to host the actual reception in the backyard of their home, but then also needed to find a suitably similar setting for the 200-plus guests to enjoy dinner and dancing afterwards.
This was a dual-location wedding where bringing together a modern foundation with some richer more organic elements would create a contemporary setting as chic as the couple themselves.

Invitations designed by the groom's brother featured their first initials interwoven, kept connection and a touching element

this amazing uni-

The ceremony & bamboo chairs
more unique shi
a non-traditional surrounded the exchanged vow

The dinner was i warehouse, con
into a stunning d
removed tables, chairs, and an at
and florals (one owner of Brandon
and including his florals was a key

The grooms' her
the centre of the a wall must both fittingly – the in-

Contemporary C
warmth combine

INDIVIDUAL

R THE TOP gance

hosted, I have been the fit a ceremony guests would ing above what g pool – covered almost 3 weeks to re beginning...

wish for their the backyard ing, are not ve bride also legant as a friend k pushed farther d to line the end walls while engineered flooring was installed to offer one of the most luxurious temporary environments guests would ever experience. A classic black and white dance floor centred the room with greenery walls and topiaries providing a lush backdrop, and the entire space was lit to perfection with a combination of traditional chandeliers and theatrical lighting.

From the first dance through the wee hours guests were transported to a world of elegance, opulence and glamour, proving once more that with a vision (and of course of Entertainment) anything is possible, even creating the most elegant ballroom ever... in a backyard tent.

to were transported to l of elegance, opulence and glamour.

Photo: Rod Landwood

Photo: Bruce Gibson

While intimate in this setting was not but simple.

ULTRA glam

Opulence comes in many forms and when we first met Brittany and Ansel we were struck with how clear their vision was for their special day. While many of our clients have an idea of what they are looking for, Brittany had been building a 'look-book' of ideas for her perfect wedding for years.

While intimate in size, this wedding was anything but simple. Gold – Brittany's favourite colour – can be challenging to incorporate without feeling traditional so we accented our gold chairs and tableware with more muted tones of linens and then balanced the look with bold tropical florals that the bride and groom were able to see their vision which let the eyes as to Brittany and Ansel wedding that was glamorous but no in any way. With their vision brought the style into the bride, groom and used on creating a warm and comfortable setting.

IC e featured ks but each that cannot s about. And er insurance
bout them out their

we made while t good friends
t making.

Chic wedding receiving.

lonis, the
I even the
and instead warm and flected what all about.

burgundean

style) filled with friends and family created an evening of great food and artistic company that would be long remembered.

While the more casual feel is not necessarily difficult to achieve, we had to constantly remind ourselves that this was after all a wedding. Guests would arrive all dressed up and expect an evening of elegance, and while it might not be elegant in a traditional manner, this wedding still be a grand affair.

Rustic weddings have recently become more and more popular both for their simplicity and sometimes because they can be executed with smaller budgets since there are less elements. Most of our clients, however, who choose a rustic theme do so because it speaks to their aesthetic and their personality. It is their special day after all and our job is to always have the wedding reflect the two most important people in the room.

Photos: Tom Klau

Photo: Caryn May

Weddings come in all different sizes and budgets. Each is the most special day for the bride, groom, their family and friends. Whatever your choice of décor, Sheila and I always offer brides and grooms the same advice...

Enjoy the day. Celebrate. Don't sweat the little things, because before you know it the day will be over, and the day is the first of the rest of your lives together, so make it matter. Oh... and make sure you hire the right event company.

Sebastian & Sheila
Entertainment Events & Catering @sebandsheila @sebcenter @sheilacenter @entertainment

MODERN elegance

We end with a wedding which brought together elements from all four of the themes featured so far, with Myoshi and Chris' wedding in Toronto at The One Eighty.

Often our wedding clients might not have a specific look or feel but rather lots of elements they love. It becomes our job to take all these ideas and build a cohesive décor plan that works as an overall environment.

Fortunately eclectic works in décor, meaning that it is far less important for things to match than for things to suit each other. We see this in interior design, fashion, photography and now weddings.

Combining more formal items like and linen tables elegant element and gold rims brought a unique

Floral in light it were offset well to balance the I accented with personalized in champagne bar

The bride and groom wedding to bring they love most live most and I old that.

The bride and groom, their wedding to bring the people they love

INDIANT